HOW SOME COAL COMPANIES

Loose Money—Save at The Spigot and Waste at The Bung Hole

The following article by Newell G. Alford of this city, appeared in the "Coal Age" of Sept. 27th, as an Editorial. It is full of food for thought.

Has it ever occurred to you that in these days of dawning in efficiency organization and safety first, many coal officials fail to scrutinize the warp and woof in the fabrics of their mining operations?

These same individuals regale themselves in wordy talks on economy, hold up their hands in holy horror at the semblance of an excessive "first cost" when purchasing, yet fail to extract efficient service from the material they buy.

Should we classify this personal quality as a human frailty? Perhaps, but let us look still farther.

"Safety first" flashes across your mental vision by instinct as the first and last care of operation. The efficiency of the workman holds, logically, the next place in your thought. On the heels of this comes the necessary balancing of cautious purchases with the careful attention to the service rendered by the material. Yes, careful attention is right.

Can you, Messrs. Manager and Superintendent, be candid with yourself in answering the next two questions?

Have you steel rail, compressed-air or water pipe, electric wire or anything else in your abandoned workings which is still available for use in some other part of your mine? Have you thought of that, or are you merely putting off the utilization of this second-hand material until "tomorrow"?

Without casting reflections, grant that you have these materials in accessible but worked-out rooms. Still further, for the sake of discussion, admit that these materials (partly used) have not been reclaimed because of the oversight of an inside boss. Again, since neither you nor the engineers ever wander through these abandoned workings, you know nothing of the conditions there and hence cannot order an adjustment.

This is consistent with the extreme caution you exercised in purchasing this rail, pipe or what not? Decidedly not.

To bring out more clearly the inconsistency of this pseudo-economy, which saves at the spigot and wastes at the bunghole, let us review the following instance, which by the way is not an hypothesis.

A coal-mining company whose annual output is over two million tons, installed an electric power plant, to operate on the exhaust steam from noncondensing engines. The newly installed plant, which cost $70,000, enabled the operators to abandon the former electric plant whose annual operating cost was $15,000. This was consistent with efficient management and operation.

On the other hand this company has one 1000-ton mine with 3000 ft. of 3-in. compressed-air pipe, with half its use still available, lying in an old heading. In a second mine there are 30 idle-room switches and two miles of steel rail that has not out-lived its usefulness. In yet another mine, electric cable and lighting wire hang on the timbers in old workings.

A rough estimate shows that the company loses between $500 and $1000 annually at each of ten mines. The reason is self-evident.

It would cost this corporation five dollars per day to have one of its competent engineers make the rounds, and report possible economies to his general manager. Such a report, made once a month, taking 10 days to cover 10 mines would cost $800 per year. The total resultant saving would vary between five and ten thousand dollars annually—a nice return on the $300 invested.

There are, of course, mines where the cost of labor is reclaiming material from old workings makes such a scheme impracticable; however, these instances are isolated exceptions to the general rule.

Nothing is more rare than consistency. Most of us practice economy upside down. In such matters we are generally ambidextrous, easily and heedlessly spending with our left hand what we save with our right. Sit a moment and think—

Are you saving at the spigot and wasting at the bung-hole?

Kentucky Christian Missionary Convention at Bowling Green

Howard J. Brazelton, Geo. W. Wyatt, Mrs. John L. Long, Mrs. L. V. Renfro, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Browning, returned last Friday from Bowling Green where they attended the Missionary and Bible School Convention of Kentucky Christian Churches.

In spite of the fact that the Convention was held in the extreme Western portion of the state necessitating many to travel a whole day's journey, there were several delegates in attendance.

The convention was held in three sections, each section occupying a day of the Convention. The Christian Woman's Board of Mission occupied Tuesday with its sessions, comprising splendid addressess, reports of the last years works and plans for the future. Twenty-five thousand dollars was raised by this organization during the year.

They are maintaining schools at Morehead and Hazel Green, besides doing evangelistic work. The Earlinton Auxiliary to this work was on the Honor Roll for having reached the standard of efficiency during the year.

The State Missionary Board held its session Wednesday. W. G. Eldred, former pastor of the Earlinton Church presided and delivered a splendid address. Reports showed 14 thousand dollars raised by this organization and expended for evangelizing the needy districts of Kentucky. E. L. Powell, of Louisville, delivered a notable address on Wednesday night on "Kentucky and A Missionary Opportunity."

The Bible School section of the Convention attracted considerable attention. During the year four men have been sustained as field workers, and the Bible Schools throughout the state have been brought to a higher state of efficiency. This work has been supported by the contributions

MOVING PICTURE INDUSTRY MOST PROFITABLE IN WORLD

Films Which Cost Over $300,000 Are Sold
For Twenty-Five Cents a Foot, Netting About $800,000

Eight Very Big Film Manufacturers in Europe—Two and Three Color Films—Cost $250,000 to Produce "Hamlet" With Forbes-Robinson—One Woman Gets Above $10,000 Weekly for Animal Pictures

Boston—There are some investments and industries in the world of which little is heard in Wall Street. There are fewer people directly interested in automobiles than in moving pictures, but there are columns in the newspapers surrounded by pages of advertising concerning automobiles. Once in a while a ten-line ad and sometimes a paragraph concerning moving pictures may be found in the popular press.

It may be asserted, however, that throughout the world the moving picture business is collecting more money than automobiles.

There are eight very big concerns in Europe who manufacture the moving picture films, and they supply the largest part of the world. The black film is likely to be superseded by the two-color film, and that in time by the three-color, which is now a little in use in Europe, but is being held back in this country until the vocal parts can be so provided that an opera may be given, with the stage presented in three colors and Carus and Melba heard in their famous parts with mechanical acoustics. Few people realize that from $250,000 to $350,000 may be invested in making a first picture film. Quo Vadis, it is said, cost $280,000. Then it was manifolded into 400 copies of 8,000 feet each and sold at 25 cents a foot, or $800,000. A moving picture is good without translation in every language and has just as good a market in South America and Australia as in France and Germany.

To put the drama of "Atlantis" into moving pictures the makers chartered a steamer of 12,000 tons and sent it to Iceland with a crew and a company of 400 to produce the picture at a cost of $225,000.

To put Forbes-Robinson as Hamlet on the film cost at least ten times what it ever cost to stage any Hamlet that was ever presented. The makers thereof paid $75,000 for the use of a castle and costumed about 400 people therein, making the manufacturing cost $250,000, but they sold 3,000,000 feet of this film for 25 cents a foot. It cost $230,000 to make the "Tiger Hunt," which likewise went from the manufacturers at 25 cents a foot for the film. The film of Captain Scott in the Antarctic cost $250,000, and Mrs. Scott still draws a royalty on its production in Australia, as well as North and South America. Her royalty collected is already above the original cost of the picture.

Actors of ability and experts can get the highest wages in these mechanical stage parts. But actors are not in it with freak performers. Actors may get from $300 to $500 a week for their part in making moving pictures, but the freak people get $800 to $500 a day; and one woman in the world gets about $10,000 a week for risking her life in cages with lions, tigers and leopards, and she is engaged eight and ten weeks ahead.

In kid tights she will permit herself to be buffeted and knocked around in cages of wild animals and regarded by her brutal playfellows as just one of themselves; but no other woman in the world can fill her part. When her rehearsal takes place she names every eye outside of the camera eye that shall see her performance, for a sound or gesture from outside might cost her life. As she herself says, "One tooth in my jugular and that's the end and I will take no more risks than necessary."

This woman, who is still young, was brought up with animals and moved about with them and their trainers from the time before moving pictures were invented. She does not work by a glance of the eye or commanding attitudes. She knows it would be death to carry her hands behind her or in any position of suspicion or defense. She must be with the animals with open palms and even with closed eyes, but she does not hesitate to caress with oiled palms the wounds of animals where they have been burned against the electric wires of their cages. She does this with as great naturalness as a dog will lick its neighbor's sores. In fact, her safety is in becoming one with the animals.

Moving pictures give value to thrilling incidents that formerly had the narrowest circulation and therefore the smallest pay.

Formerly a man jumped from the Brooklyn Bridge to win fame or a wager. Now the value of a moving picture jump from Brooklyn Bridge is just $500, and the man who made a parachute descent from the pyramidal tower of the Bankers Trust Company Building in New York for a moving picture got $1,000 therefore, but the man who got the permit from the building was paid much more.

of the schools amounting to nearly ten thousand dollars. The addresses of the day were of a high order, and the morning Conferences conducted by specialists each day were very instructive. The Adult Class banquet in which over three hundred representatives of Adult Classes participated was a great success. This was presided over by W. J. Clarke who conducted an institute with the Earlinton School last spring.

REV. GRANT RETURNS TO EARLINGTON

Campbellsville, Ky., Sept. 30th.—The Methodist Conference in session here, celebrated its sixty-fifth annual session when Bishop A. W. Wilson announced the appointments for the ministers of next year. Quite a battle was waged in the election of the clerical delegates to the general conference. Gross Alexander was elected on the third ballot. There was no election on the fourth. The conference adjourned and was called to order by the Rev. Frank M. Thomas at 7:30 o'clock in order to cast the fifth ballot, when the Rev. J. T. Rushing, of Elizabethtown, was elected. The voting became spirited in the next ballot, and inasmuch as no one was nominated in open conference the vote was scattered among a large number of candidates with no election. The seventh ballot was taken and resulted in no election. The eighth ballot was taken and the Rev. S. J. Thompson was elected.

FOREST NOTES

The railroads of the United States use about 150,000,000 wooden ties each year.

Cadillac, Mich., is reported to be the foremost city in the country for varied and close utilization of forest products.

More than one-fourth of all the sheep in the eleven states nearest the Pacific coast are grazed on the national forests.

The national forests contain water powers with an aggregate estimated capacity of 12,000,000 horse power, available for use under permit from the secretary of agriculture.

Much of the piling, wharf material, and lock gates of the Panama canal are made of greenheart, said to be the most durable wood known for these purposes, which comes mainly from British Guiana.

The western forestry and conservation association will hold its annual conference about December 15. This year it will meet at Vancouver, B. C., and will give its main consideration to the problem of forest fire prevention control.

MOTHER! IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

If cross, feverish, constipated, bilious, stomach sour, give "California Syrup of Figs"

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, bad breath, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailments, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleaning" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has full direction for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Company. Don't be fooled!
